Education in War

This vivid and startling revelation of the sixteen months of Japanese military aggression in China has been written by H. J. Timperley, China correspondent for the Manchester Guardian, to further educate the world in the meaning of modern war. It is, to be sure, a strong indictment of the Japanese military party, which or the Japanese military party, which centrols with an iron hard politics, education, religion, industry, and even the social existence of the inhabitants of Nippon; the author, however, has not compiled this concise volume of documentary evidence of the large deliberation. the Japs' deliberately ruthless war policies in China primarily as anti-Japanese propaganda. The sources of Japanese propagana. The sources of the author's information are unimpeachable, for the letters and diary accounts which comprise the greater part of the book were smuggled through the Japanese lines by American and European men who risked death in the hope they might some-what alleviate the pain and suffering of the Chinese people.

A little more than half of the material is eyewitness accounts in diary terial is eyewiness accounts in diary or report form of the Japanese army's program of terrorism—of murder, robbery, and rape committed upon the civilians of Shanghai, Wusih, Sungkiang, Canton, Hangchow and thousands of smaller towns, villages and farms. Authentic statistics tell of the lection of privately council for of the looting of privately owned fac-tories, of the shipping to Japan of all tories, of the shipping to Japan of all metal, including machinery and such small objects as doorknobs, and of the systematic destruction of educa-tional centers and hospitals, foreign-owned or otherwise. Japanese People Being Duped. An extensive appendix includes dozens of letters and case reports from the International Committee for the Nanking Safety Zone, which group of neutral observers fed and gave all possible protection to the thousands of destitute Chinese civilians. There are copies of letters sent to the high Japanese authorities requesting quite in vain, for permission to buy food and for disciplinary measures against the Jap army. Especially significant are Japanese newspaper articles and news reports, which stress in glowing terms the love of the Chinese for the "kind Japanese soldiers," thus revealing that the people of Japan as a whole are being duped." reveaus, a whole are being duped.

Japanese Terror in China is restrained in tone. It does not go into great detail, but simply depicts—without the intervention of censorship—the degeneration of Japan's holy war into a campaign of sordid pillage.
