

Canada's Justice Minister Accuses B. C. Premier, Udall of 'Power Sellout'

By E. B. FUSSELL
New friction between Canada and the United States over the Columbia River power treaty was threatened today.

E. D. Fulton, Canadian minister of justice, last night included Interior Secretary Stewart Udall of the United States Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia and unidentified American power groups as parties in an attempted "power sellout."

Fulton spoke at Prince George, B. C. He is one of the negotiators of the power treaty.

Fulton said Bennett is attempting to sell Canada's share of Columbia River power to the United States on a long-term basis, 50 to 60 years.

Canada's national government is against power exports. The government will continue to resist any long-term commitments, Fulton said.

"Udall is reported as saying he is confident the Canadian government will permit sale of our rights," Fulton said. "Secretary Udall knows what our stand has been, yet he presumes to forecast a change in our policy. Why this pressure play?"

Udall said in Washington sale of Canadian power is a matter for the Canadians to decide. But he said recapture provisions could protect Canadian interests, the Associated Press reported.

Fulton's heaviest blast, however, were against Premier Bennett and the British Columbia government.

Bennett proposes the long-term sale of Canada's Columbia River "benefit power" to the United States and the development of Peace River power for British Columbia.

Benefit power is the Canadian share of power developed at United States plants by storage dams to be built in Canada under treaty terms. The treaty, negotiated last year, has been ratified by the United States but not by Canada.

Fulton said Bennett pretended to have support from President Kennedy as a result of a Seattle meeting November 16 when in fact it was a "little more than a rendezvous at a reception line."

Bennett, in Victoria, refused comment. Attorney General Robert Bonner called Fulton's speech "a fantastic blunder."

The Army Corps of Engineers is "assuming" the Columbia River treaty will be ratified by Canada, Lieut. Gen. W. K. Wilson, Jr., new head of the corps, said in Walla Walla today.

Wilson is in the Pacific Northwest for his first official tour since he became top officer.

Women drivers are involved in only 12 per cent of United States automobile accidents.

Several young inspectors of the British Metropolitan Police will visit secondary schools to talk about Police-cadet prospects.
