FINE ARTS.

GALLERY NEWS.

Among the pieces of furniture placed by the gallery in the house of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Halsey, at 167 South Fourth Street, one of the most noticeable groupings has been the filling of a small corner of the main hall with a large piece of carved oak furniture, consisting of a table and two chairs. These pieces were made in the 17th century in the style of English Jacobean, and were purchased by Mr. Halsey from the estate of his late wife, who was a great lover of fine art. The table is of a graceful design, with delicate carvings of leaves and flowers, while the chairs are equally fine in workmanship. They are all in perfect condition, and are a fine example of the best work of the period. The gallery is also showing a number of other pieces of furniture, including a fine set of Chinese cabinets and a large collection of European paintings, which are sure to please the discriminating eye of the connoisseur.
