DETROIT, Oct. 14.—By defeating Detroit this afternoon, 2 to 0, the Chicago team of the National League retained its title as the champion baseball team of the world. The present series differed but little from that of last year. In the previous series Detroit managed to get one tie game and then went down in four straight defeats. In the present series Detroit snatched one victory out of the five games played.

Cubs the Better Team

The Chicago team, according to the critics, showed superiority in every department of the game in the series as a whole, although this superiority was not so apparent on the day that Detroit batted a victory off Pfeister's curves. Detroit was handicapped by Schmidt's inability to cut down runners at second and by the failure of her heavy hitting outfield to bat at critical moments when hits meant runs. None of the Detroit pitchers seemed able to consistently puzzle the Chicago batsmen, for even Mullin, who pitched Detroit's only victory, was fanned for seven hits. Throughout the series Chicago's hitting was opportune. The occasions were rare when, with men on bases and runs needed, a Chicago batsman was not there with the needed hit.

The games were singularly free from squabbling, and on only two or three occasions were the decisions of the umpires questioned. At no time was it necessary for a player to be sent to the bench to enforce discipline and good order. The series, however, created less interest in the two cities most affected than that of last year, if the attendance may be taken as a guide.

Receipts Were Small

The paid admissions were only 62,232 for the five games, and the receipts totaled but $94,078, as compared with $101,000 last year. The attendance at the final game this afternoon was but 6210, with gross receipts of $9577.50.

Of the money taken in the players of Chicago, the winning team, get $27,669, and the Detroit players, $18,446. The club owners get $19,681 apiece and the National Commission $9497.

When the last man on the Detroit side went out today the pendulum of victory ceased its swing between the two leagues. In 1903 the world's championship emblem went to Boston of the American League; in the succeeding series New York brought it back to the National League. In the following year the Chicago "White Stockings" recaptured it for the younger organization. Last year the Chicago "Cubs" brought it back to the National League by defeating Detroit. But this year the pendulum did not swing back and the flag remains as the proudest exhibit which President Murphy has to display at the West Side Ball Park in Chicago.

Detroit in Mourning

There is gloom in Detroit tonight. The black stripes which alternated with yellow in the scheme of decoration look like crape hung out for the death of hopes that are gone. Detroit "Tiger," unlike the Limerick, has no smile on its face. But while the crowd on the street corners and in the hotel lobbies murmur pessimistically, there is one bold spirit which does not know the meaning of the word defeat. This dauntless heart beats in the breast of Manager Hugh Jennings, of Detroit. He believes in his team—believes that it will yet prove its superiority over all comers—and he does not contemplate past defeats, but looks forward to another year and another struggle which may have another result. Jennings was not beaten today until Schmidt's foul in the ninth had found secure and final lodgment in Kling's capacious mitt.

Through the fierce uphill battle this afternoon he stood on the coaching line off first base, coaching the runners on every move and spurring the batsmen on to make their best efforts. No success of the rival team and no failure of his own club damaged his cheerfulness. There was never a faltering note in his well known cry of "wee-ah" and any slight advantage set him to executing his peculiar war dance.

A feature of the game was Schmidt's recovery of his throwing arm, which had not been working well during any previous game. Chicago was not able to steal a base on him for the first time during the series. He caught Steinfeldt trying to steal second by yards; he handled two bunts in clean fashion, retiring his men at first, and he broke up an attempted double steal by Evers and Chance.

Overall Pitched Strong Game

Overall for the second time pitched a masterly game. Only three hits were made off him and one of these would have been an easy out had the ball not taken an erratic and unexpected bound as it approached Steinfeldt. He was wild at times, giving four bases on balls, but on the other hand his strikeouts numbered ten. One of these strikeouts, however, occurred when Rossman made his third swing at a wild pitch, enabling him to reach first safely.

Donovan, on the other hand, met with a very vigorous reception in the first inning, when three consecutive hits sent Evers over the plate with the first run of the game. With the exception of the fifth inning, when a base on balls and Evers' double gave Chicago another run, Donovan managed to keep the hits scattered. It is probable, however, that Chicago would have run up a larger score had it not been for the brilliant work of the Detroit infield. O'Leary's spectacular catch of Tinker's "Texas leaguer" far back of second base was a feature of the game.

Evers scored Chicago's first run. He singled to centre, took second on Schulte's hit to left and raced home on Chance's safe drive to centre. A base on balls was primarily responsible for Chicago's second and last run. Kling walked on four wide ones, went to second on Overall's sacrifice and scored on Evers' double.

Detroit threatened to score but once. Coughlin was safe when his grounder to Steinfeldt took an awkward bound and he went to third when McIntyre doubled into the left field crowd. But the needed hit was not forthcoming from either O'Leary or Crawford, for the former flew out to Hofman, who held Coughlin at third by a beautiful throw home, and Crawford struck out.
