Overview

This family of digital resources for international studies provides global perspectives on many of today's most relevant research areas. Each of these collections offers insight and unprecedented opportunities for teaching and scholarship in some of the most-searched topics in libraries today. Researchers are increasingly looking to 20th-century geopolitics to inform a variety of disciplines, and these ten collections from the archives of the Central Intelligence Agency give libraries the opportunity to meet these current needs. Each is comprised of primary source documents from around the world, including government publications, magazines, newspapers and transcribed television and radio broadcasts, all collected and translated by the Central Intelligence Agency between 1941 and 1996.
