Overview

Early American Newspapers, Series 12, 1821-1900, expands significantly on the 11 previous series. With more than 1,200 titles spanning 49 states and the District of Columbia, Series 12 is by far the largest selection of early U.S. newspapers offered to date, dramatically extending the political, geographical and subject-matter breadth and depth of Early American Newspapers.

First access to hundreds of short-lived newspapers

Series 12 offers students and scholars online access to more than a thousand of the rarest newspapers published across the United States—for the first time ever. Designed to meet multidisciplinary research and teaching needs, Series 12 provides journalistic accounts and commentary rich in topics essential to the humanities and social sciences. The collection not only presents vital new coverage of local, regional and national history, culture and daily life, but also critical facets of U.S. business, politics and religion.

Key titles include Mercantile Gazette and Prices Current (San Francisco, CA), Grand Valley Star (Grand Junction, CO), Daily Globe (Washington, DC), Ka Elele Hawaii (Honolulu, HI), Dubuque Daily Times (Dubuque, IA), New Orleans Republican (New Orleans, LA), The Reformer and Campaign Times (Boston, MA), Maine Farmer (Augusta, ME), Western Episcopalian (Gambier, OH), The Spirit of '76 (Nashville, TN), Wisconsin Daily Patriot (Madison, WI), The Journal (Tacoma, WA) and many others.

Many new subject-specific papers

Series 12 offers an especially rich trove of titles in specific disciplines. For the study of economic and industrial history a large number of agricultural and mercantile titles are included. Campaign newspapers are represented by titles covering all presidential and many important regional campaigns from the Early National Era to Reconstruction. Denominational newspapers provide new insight into religion—the epicenter of nearly everything in the 19th century—and offer unique commentary on such divisive issues as slavery, women's suffrage and prohibition. In addition, gazettes—known as newspapers of record—are replete with prized statistical data.

In short, Series 12 provides intimate insight into major transformations and issues that shaped 19th-century American society. Issues covered include abolitionism, immigration, labor, farming, manufacturing, invention, African American and Native American history, the Second Great Awakening, the Civil War, westward expansion, government corruption and the rise of commerce and communications.
